

CareerBuilder Launches Age-o-Matic.com

New Site Allows People to See How They Will Look in the Year 2057 - Or If They Stay in a Bad Job

Ever get the feeling your job will be the death of you? From the creators of the wildly popular Monk-e-Mail.com comes Age-o-Matic.com, a site that demonstrates how working in a stressful office environment can literally age you. CareerBuilder.com and agency of record Cramer-Krasselt have teamed up again to deliver this interactive viral experience that cleverly captures the sentiment motivating workers to seek out new opportunities in the New Year: the desire for a better job and a better place to work.

Age-o-Matic uses new technology to age people's photos an average of 50 years, and then allows them to e-mail ancient talking versions of themselves to unsuspecting recipients. After uploading a photo, each visitor is asked to answer a few simple -- and utterly outrageous -- questions about their work environment such as, "At work they call me: a) Hey You b) El Stupido or c) No. 655321." Age-o-Matic instantly produces jaw-dropping, dramatically-altered photos depicting how they will look if they stay in their current positions. They can send talking e-mail messages from their aged selves to friends, family, co-workers and, yes, even the boss.

From a technological standpoint, Age-o-Matic is a leap ahead of other photo manipulation sites. This is the first site to allow an uploaded photo to be aged, as well as integrated into talking avatar technology.

"With Age-o-Matic, we will continue to focus on the theme of job dissatisfaction, a potent message that has enabled CareerBuilder.com to connect with millions of consumers over the last two years," said Richard Castellini, Vice President of Consumer Marketing at CareerBuilder.com. "Age-o-Matic is an evolution of last year's online execution, actively engaging consumers in the brand while enabling them to have greater control over content and customization. We expect the experience to resonate well as workers re-evaluate and seek out new jobs in the New Year."

Age-o-Matic builds on the success of the critically-acclaimed Monk-e-Mail, which has logged more than 83 million plays, over 31 million user sessions and nearly 12 million unique visitors since its launch one year ago. Just as Monk-e-Mail is based on a common expression about work: "I work with a bunch of monkeys," Age-o-Matic is based on its own expression of dissatisfaction: "This job is going to kill me!"

"We've always known that bad jobs can make us 'feel' old, and Age-o-Matic has created an environment where dissatisfied employees can actually 'see' how their bad jobs are impacting them," said Marshall Ross, C-K's Chief Creative Officer. "This is the sweet spot of viral marketing because the entertainment value is high while still being a highly strategic fit for the CareerBuilder brand."

According to a nationwide survey of 6,169 workers by CareerBuilder.com, one-in-five workers reported they plan to change jobs in 2007. When evaluating potential employers, workers cited a good work environment as one of the top three factors that are most critical to them.
